

Rudolph Olson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Knute Olson, was brought to town yesterday, to have Dr. Truscott set a break in his right arm just above the wrist. He was working in the hay meadow when the accident happened. The horses which he was driving on a rake were frightened when the poles broke, and in effort to hold them he was dragged from the seat and for a considerable distance on the ground, before the fracture was sustained. The same arm was broken five years ago, and only three inches above the present break.
