

ant events since the war began.

Torger Rogne returned Saturday from Valley City, where he had successfully passed the examination for enlistment in the North Dakota National guards. He has received no official notification when to report to his company, but has arranged his business affairs so that he can leave at a moment's notice. Torger was not subject to the draft law, being over age, and though only having his first paper, he felt it his patriotic duty to answer the nation's call. The Times wishes him good luck, and may he return to Binford alive, and happy, in that he did his bit to "can the Kaiser."
