

of the animals' position and satisfied that the freak was no fake they left the bodies undisturbed.

The next morning J. E. Fox and Photographer John Harter drove out and after taking a number of photographs from various angles, they took the creatures up and brot them to town. They will have them mounted and placed in the position in which they were originally found.

The cat is a normally sized grey cat and the dog is a short haired mongrel about twice the size of the cat. They belonged to Iver Skaar and the place where they were found was in an open field about an eighth of a mile from the farm buildings. They had been missing about a week.