

John E. Sutton discovered a pair of bugs in his garden last week that live on potatoe bugs. They are highly colored, are somewhat round in shape, with flat backs on which are a number of ridges that diverge from the center. The bugs have long pointed snouts with which they catch and hold the potato bug while devouring them. Mr. Sutton is guarding them very closely.—Sutton Reporter.

A representative of Equity associa-