

Printer Goes to War.

Ben Taylor, formerly on the Pioneer force, is now a real soldier and is stationed at Deming, New Mexico. Ben will make a good soldier. His experience on the Pioneer force will prove of much value to him. He did a lot of soldiering when he worked for us. He is a well-meaning, patriotic man, nevertheless, and we wish him well. We believe he will make a good fighter. He has fought ever since he was a kid. When he was not fighting men he was fighting booze. He was a great temperance worker, but could never get the best of the distilleries. They kept ahead of him all the time. Whatever or whoever Ben started out to do, he did well. He will help bring the war to a speedy end, quicker than the pope, if he gets on the firing line. When he runs out of ammunition he will shoot off his mouth. We have always liked Ben, he has always been dear to us. What he has always needed most was discipline and distance from booze, and these he will get in the army. The army is the only thing we know of that might be big enough to do this. If it is successful, Ben will be when he comes back, and we hope he does.

—Plaza Pioneer.