

Harwell Is on the Job.

The Times is in receipt of the current issue of the Home Scout Herald, a monthly magazine for boys and girls, published in Chicago. This is a new magazine and Harwell West, a Binford boy, will be its first editor. Harwell was selected for this position from a large number of other boys all over the United States, who had entered the contest for the position.

The front page is devoted to a lengthy introduction of the new editor, and a splendid likeness of Harwell adorns the top of the page. It is an eight-page magazine, chuck full of interesting reading.

Harwell's duties begin with the preparation of the October issue and for the next six months he will have complete charge of the editorial department. At the expiration of that time he will relinquish his position to some other boy, to accept another position with the same company.

The Times feels a peculiar interest in Harwell's future. He served an apprenticeship of two years in this office, and during six months of that time he published the Dakota Scout, a lone scout paper, conceded one of the best in the states. Harwell's rare judgment in overcoming the many complexities confronting one so young and inexperienced in newspaper making, convinced us that he had found his calling, and his new position with the Home Scout Herald is a long step towards fame in the field of journalism. Harwell will make a good record for his successors to follow. We have the utmost confidence in his ability to make good and we'll watch his progress with much interest.

Good luck, Harwell!

Congratulations, Home Scout Herald.
