Van Hook Tribune: S. E. Westerdahl is as honest as the light from the moon. Saturday night he took out some supplies intended for his homestead. During Saturday another homesteader had erected a domicile this side of Weste's. The night being dark; he mistook his own home for the newcomer's. Unloading his cargo he entered. Lights on he discovered he was in the wrong pew, and proceeded to remove everything—whether on his inventory or not—when caught in the act.
