

The school entertainment at the town hall Friday night was a grand affair. It was a success both financially and socially. Dr. Featherstone operated the graphophone like an old veteran, and its tone of voice was decidedly clear and distinct. Atty. Shippy addressed the audience in a fitting manner, and his words were appropriate and well delivered. He told us of the wonderful machine in a brief way, and of the many electrical inventions before the birth of the graphophone. The program as published in last week's Pioneer was rendered to the to the satisfaction of all. L. A. Jacobson sang a favorite love song to the machine and Mrs. C. G. Merriell officiated at the piano. The machine, after being well oiled told us what Jake was singing about, but the piano, from where the writer sit, was hard to hear. After the show was over Dr. Featherstone and Prof. Moody each received a vote of thanks and many kind words from Atty. Shippy and the audience, but not one word was said about free advertising. The Pioneer gave the whole affair—and we feel hurt. One noticeable feature about the talking machine in its favor was, that the writer could hear much more distinctly from the rear end of the hall, than up close, where we first occupied a seat. The machine is indeed a wonder. The total receipts for the school library fund was $45.30, and much credit is due both Prof. Moody and Dr. Featherstone.
