

Clarky, of the Valley City Advocate, can tell some pretty good stories, and here is a sample. He says: "During the recent blizzard the experience gained by many will be most valuable at another time. One gentleman in Valley City in order to get his horse out of the barn fastened sled runners to the aforesaid quadruped's feet and slid him out of the second story window via an inclined drift to the level below a distance of nearly a quarter of a mile."