

For some time past Billy Murray and R. L. Towle, a school teacher down at Colgate, have had an idea that each could floor the other in a catch-as-catch-can wrestling match. About a month ago they got together and Murray threw Towle. Since that time Mr. Towle has thought he couldn't do it again, so—Monday night, arrangements were made, and each man appeared at Loney's skating rink stripped to the waist, and began operations, in the presence of about fifty spectators. Murray floored Towle twice—slick as grease. We are told that each man bet $10, making a purse of $20. An admission fee of 25 cents was charged at the door, and $12.50 taken in. The loser received one-fourth of the gate money. Andrew Sinclair, of Cooperstown, was referee.
