

It has often been remarked that the meanest man on earth is the fellow that will subscribe for the home newspaper and then refuse to pay for it. Two of the lowest type we have ever met, are F. V. Wallace, of Page and Charles Park, of Sharon. They each are behind—only a small amount—on subscription, but refuse to pay, and still wants us to stop their papers and allow them to beat us out of our money. To show you how small they are, just look here. Wallace is owing us since Nov. 8, and Park since Sept. 6—only trifling amounts—but several such, soon count up big to us. Then why should we be loser? Why don't they be men, and pay what is due; then we will willingly and gladly stop their paper. The law will allow us to send the paper to any address as long as there is an arrearage. We can commence suit for the amount, and collect it where the parties are worth it, if they are not; we can get judgement. There are a few who will hear from us in this way, before a great while too. In the cases of Wallace and Park, The Pioneer will continue to go to their address until settled for. The longer it goes, the larger grows the account. We intend to make an example of these two fellows, not for the amount of the bills, but for the benefit of others, and the mean way they are acting,
