F. W. Soule, the Eyesight specialist, will be at Hannaford Hotel again Wednesday, Oct. 11, one day only, prepared to examine defective eyes and fit glasses when needed. Don't miss this chance. Last visit this year.

The N. P. will run a special train from Cooperstown to Bismarck next Saturday morning, returning in the evening. It will be known as the Griggs County Progress Club Special and will give all those wishing to go a chance to spend a day at the Industrial Exposition at Bismarck.

Cooperstown Courier: Rev. J. M. Jenson preached his farewell sermon in the Lutheran church in this city last Sunday evening and was greeted by a large audience. After spending the week visiting friends around Mr. and Mrs. Jenson will leave on Monday next for their new home at Badger, Iowa. We wish them good luck and success in their new home.

Two of the Great Northern grading outfits were shipped out last week. Contractor Thompson's outfit had been at work on a job west of town and shipped to a point on the line west of Fargo. The other crew had been at work near the Sheyenne and went west to work for some other company.

Dr. F. W. Chandler, the Fargo dentist, will be in Hannaford again, from noon Oct. 18, to noon Oct. 19, Wednesday and Thursday. Have your teeth examined now. Dental work of all kinds done in an up-to-date and satisfactory manner. Owing to illness Dr. Chandler was unable to make his regular visit last month but is now again able to attend to his work.

Jacob Kittelson met with a painful accident some days ago. He was assisting to move a granary and attempted to walk between the engine which was to pull the building, and the granary, and was caught between the engineer's platform and the granary wall just as the engine was backing up. If the wall had not yielded a little it is probable that both his legs would have been broken but as it was he suffered only a sprain. Last Tuesday he was compelled to seek medical advice, but it is hoped no further complications will result from the accident.

Chas. J. Anderson, a farmer who lives about ten miles west of Hannaford, was severely injured by fire resulting from a gasoline explosion, on Monday evening, Oct. 2. The hired man was filling a lighted lantern with kerosene when the oil caught fire and spread to a gasoline can close by, causing an explosion. A young son of Mr. Anderson was in the room and in rescuing him Mr. Anderson was so badly burned about the right arm and face that he will bear marks therefrom the rest of his life. The child was only slightly burned and will soon recover. Mr. Anderson had just finished threshing that evening and the crew was still at his place and helped to extinguish the fire so the house, which might otherwise have burned, was saved.

ACCIDENTAL DISCHARGE OF GUN PROVES FATAL

Albert Frazie, the young depot agent at Walum, was accidentally shot in the back at noon last Sunday while out hunting, and died from the effects of the wound at four o'clock the same day.

Mr. Frazie, in company with N. A. Sevareid and Alfred Nelson, drove down to the creek south of Walum for the purpose of shooting ducks. It seems that a flock of ducks were coming in their direction and the boys were crouching and retreating in order avoid scaring the birds until they got within range. Mr. Frazie was standing just in front of Mr. Sevareid when the latter's gun was discharged apparently by the trigger catching in some bushes. The full charge struck Mr. Frazie in the back about an inch to the left of the spine, making a round hole about an inch and a half in diameter, smashing and penetrating the left scapular blade and lodging in the left lung.

He was at once taken to the nearest farm residence, that of S. Juell, and Dr. Wicklund of Hannaford and Dr. Nolte of Dazey were summoned. Nothing, however, could be done for him, except to ease his suffering, as he was so severely shattered internally that he spat blood and pieces of lung. The accident happened about 11:45 and he died at 4 o'clock. He retained consciousness almost till the last.

Mr. Frazie was only about seventeen years old, and had been agent at Walum since this spring. His home was at Davenport, this state, where the remains were sent for interment.

His mother is at present at St. Luke's hospital recovering from an operation. It will be a very hard blow to her when the sad news of her son's death is broken to her.

The shooting was purely accidental and no blame attaches to his companions. May the accident serve as a warning to all that one cannot be too careful in the handling of firearms. It is a sad experience to all concerned, but it is hoped that others also will take the lesson taught by this accident to heart.

CANNOT COLLECT

That shipments of liquor in interstate commerce, cannot be collected for by the method of issuance of a sight draft on the bill of lading for collection by banks at the point of destination, was the decision handed down in United States district court by Judge Chas. F. Amidon.

The decision was rendered in the case of the government against the First National Bank at Anamoose, N. D., and was a test case. Congress in adopting the new criminal code, which went into effect on Jan. 1, 1910, put in a provision making it unlawful to collect the purchase price of liquor on C. O. D. shipments. Wholesalers then adopted the "draft and bill of lading" method.

United States District Attorney Engerud of Fargo some months ago advised the banks against being a party to the practice and the recent decision sustains him. Attorney General Wickersham last spring held that banks are liable to their part in such a transaction. The new decision promises to revolutionize the liquor traffic in the Northwest.
