

DEATH OF S. L. GLASPELL

DIED AT HIS HOME AT JAMESTOWN
ON SUNDAY AFTERNOON AFTER A LINGERING ILLNESS OF MANY MONTHS.

On Sunday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock occurred the death of Judge Glaspell at his home at Jamestown. He had been a great sufferer for many months from a complication of dropsy and liver troubles and his physicians considered his case hopeless.

Judge Glaspell was born in Davenport, Iowa, in 1852. He graduated at the high schools in that city in 1870, afterwards at the law schools at Iowa City, in 1874. He began the practice of law in Davenport where he resided until 1880, when on the advise of his physicians, on account of poor health he removed to North Dakota, and engaged in farming at Eldridge, near Jamestown, in the expectation that active outdoor life would be beneficial. The early years of farming, not proving profitable owing to light crops and various drawbacks incident to a new country, Judge Glaspell returned to law practice at Jamestown where he has made his home over a quarter of a century. He was active in politics and was elected member of the last territorial council of the territory of Dakota. He filled the office of states attorney of the county for two terms, at different periods.

He was elected judge of the Fifth judicial district in 1896, and served on the bench of the district for 8 years. He was regarded as one of the ablest attorneys and judges in the state, and was called from time to time to sit with the judges of the state supreme court in the hearing of cases before that body. He had the largest public law library in the state at the time of his death, and has been called to practice in all the courts in the state, and the federal courts.

He is survived by Mrs. Glaspell, two sons, Donald and Bernard, and one daughter, Mrs. L. B. McLain of Jamestown. The funeral service was held on Tuesday afternoon and the remains were shipped to his old home at Davenport, Iowa, for burial.

A Grand Family Medicine

"It gives me pleasure to speak a good word for Electric Bitters," writes Mr. Frank Conlan of No. 436 Houston St., New York. "It's a grand family medicine for dyspepsia and liver complications; while for lame back and weak kidneys it cannot be too highly recommended." Electric Bitters regulate the digestive functions, purify the blood, and impart renewed vigor and vitality to the weak and debilitated of both sexes. Sold under guarantee at Stoddard Drug Co. 50c.
