

James Keiran returned on Tuesday from Taber, Alberta, where he had been for some time looking over that part of the country. He bought a half section of land from the Southern Alberta Land Company and expects to go up there this fall to improve it. He tried in vain to find a homestead and says he had to go out too far and would rather buy the land.