

Falk Larson was in town on Monday and made the Gazette office a substantial call. Mr. Larson has been rather unfortunate this fall and has not gotten along with his work, as well as usual on account of accidents. He has been laid up himself most of the fall with a sore finger caused by an accident and then he lost a valuable team by their falling into a well which he was filling up. While near the well one of the horses stumbled and the earth gave way and he fell in, dragging the other horse with him and Mr. Larson had a narrow escape from going in himself. The well was about thirty feet deep and the two horses and a new set of harness went to the bottom and it was impossible to get them out.
