

A small blaze started up in the European restaurant last Friday between 5 and 6 p. m. caused by a leaking generator under the coffee urn. The alarm was given at the fire hall and the peals of the large fire bell rang loud enough to be heard some distance from town. "Billy" Reid is reported to having dropped his noodle griddle in the excitement of the moment upon hearing the pealing call for action. There was a ready response from the volunteer fire department and in a very short time the pump and hose were ready for action but fortunately the fire was extinguished by the application of the contents of a patent fire extinguisher. Very little damage was done except scorching some of the wall paper.
