

John Bond, who was taken to a Fargo hospital for treatment of a fractural foot and ankle which was badly injured some time ago by a fall from a horse which he was riding, had, upon the advice of the physicians there, the injured foot amputated just above the ankle and is now recovering nicely though he will be compelled to use an artificial limb. He is expected home next Saturday if no complications arise.