

---

John Bond returned Friday evening from Fargo and he alighted from the train with crutches, his foot, which he recently had amputated just below the ankle in a Fargo hospital, not being sufficiently healed to permit the adjustment of an artificial limb. He feels fine but finds it rather inconvenient to move along with the crutches.

---