

F. G. Ellis writes from Joplin, Mont., that he and his family have left their homestead near Alma and that he has accepted a position in the town of Joplin. He states that great opportunities are in store for that country though they happened to have an unusually dry season, making it hard for new settlers.

---

---