

George Farries, former publisher of the Gazette and Wimbledon News, was an arrival from the west Thursday evening on matters of business and visiting friends. Mr. Farries is well pleased with his new location and is speaking in the highest terms of the future prospects of Williston and tributary country. He is doing well and his paper, The Herald, is one of the best weekly publications in the state. Its pages teem with news not reprinted from other papers but written by himself or his staff and are always interesting reading matter. Its advertising columns indicate a healthy business activity of the city's merchants and shows the enterprising spirit of the business men.
