

gain use the injured member.

Lou Lilley came in contact with a hind foot of one of Steve Hamilton's horses, last Tuesday while working back of the horse in Tucker's barn, which came within an inch of his head and he thanks his lucky stars that his head happened to be somewhere else than in the path of the hoof. Mr. Lilley was struck by the horse once on his right knee and on his hand, causing painful though not serious injuries to those useful members, but though he still feels sore as a result of the kick he will soon be as good as ever.
