

Squash Gets Beyond Control

L. McLean, of Leonard, planted some squash this spring and they have grown so rapidly that they are beyond control. The vines are beyond the garden and are traveling on the street. He wishes to warn persons traveling along the street to avoid the fruit as he will not be responsible for accidents that may happen by running over any of the squash. A question of ownership might come up on account of them trespassing on the highway.—Sheldon Progress.
