

Hans Nelson sold all his sheep to parties living in Chicago and they were shipped Saturday night for that point. The sheep were all in good shape having fattened a good deal on the green fields left by the hail storm which destroyed nearly all of Mr. Hanson's crop last summer. He bought them at a low figure over two months ago and the experiment has proved to be a profitable one.