

Lars Nelson and A. C. Christensen had a little mix-up Saturday evening at about 9:30 in which an automobile and a carriage came off a little the worse for wear, but none of the persons involved were injured outside of a slight shaking up. Mr. Nelson and four other gentlemen were coming into town from the north in the former's auto and came upon Mr. Christensen's rig rather suddenly when but a few hundred feet from the north end of Fourth avenue. Both of the drivers evidently became somewhat excited at the sudden meeting, and, in their endeavors to get out of each others way, a collision resulted, the auto being turned over while trying to make too short a turn, and the buggy suffered a few broken spokes in one of the wheels. The horses attached to the rig driven by Mr. Christensen got loose and took a short run up the road but circled back and were easily caught. The damage caused by the accident has been adjusted to the satisfaction of all concerned, and, as far as we know, everyone is just as happy as though nothing had occurred. "All's well that ends well."
