

Here is a terse, easily understood and correct recipe for amateurs on "How to Start an Automobile," as adopted by O. E. Thoreson: "Firmly, yet gently, pull the doficker that increases the speed, back to the place where it was to begin with, put your foot on the dingfum that touches the thingumbob, press the socedolager over the button, raise the lever of the noncompositis until it is in line with the clod buster, unhook the condivi- as until it ceases to combobulate, and yank the everlasting stuffing out of the whangdoodle." — Ex.
