The bride was given away by her brother, James and the wedding procession was accompanied by the strains of the Lohengrin Wedding March rendered on the pipe organ by Mrs. W. B. DeNault. The bride's gown was blue voile, trimmed with elegant white lace, and she carried white bride's roses.

The church was elaborately decorated with sweet peas and asparagus ferns. The wedding supper was served at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Gray to a small company of friends and relatives.
