

On Tuesday evening of this week as Pete Altringer was returning home from town his horses became frightened of the Soo train just east of town and ran away. The buggy was completely demolished so that it was necessary for him to return to town and buy a new one before he could proceed home but we understand that nobody was hurt.