

Samuel Atcheson, a farmer living four miles northeast of town, was kicked in the head by a horse Tuesday afternoon and seriously injured. He was on the road to Bordulac and when about half way there he leaned over the dashboard to adjust the harness and the animal, becoming frightened, made a kick at him and landed its hoof on the top of his head, inflicting a bad cut and cracking the skull. Mr. Atcheson was somewhat stunned by the blow, but got the rig turned around and headed for town. He was taken to Dr. Martin's office for treatment, where he remained till the next day. While Mr. Atcheson is well along in years and his age is against a rapid recovery, it is thought that he will get along all right.—Kensal Journal.
