

J. H. Blahna was the victim of a runaway accident last week Wednesday and is considerably bruised up as a result. He was going home from work with a hay rake and had his two boys with him on the rake when one of the wheels struck a stone and the tongue broke and let the rake down in front throwing Mr. Blahna and the boys he was holding down by the horses. The team ran away and Mr. Blahna was dragged about a hundred rods before he got loose and as a result his left cheek bone was broken and his eye bruised besides a number of flesh wounds. Neither of the boys were injured although one of them was dragged about four rods farther than Mr. Blahna. It is almost miraculous that they were not all killed.
