

The writer ran across W. A. Blake in Jamestown the other day and that gentleman informed us that he was in Minneapolis at the time of the fire in Jamestown and it was another man and his wife of the same name who had the narrow escape from death. Mrs. Blake has been in poor health lately and they have been in Minneapolis for treatment. She is at present with her sister at Hope but they will move to Courtenay if they can get a room. They have given up their trip to the coast this winter.
