

John Hindricksen, who has been running Charlie Schumacher's threshing engine during the fall, has been in town this week laid up with a lame back. He was trying to move the tender and lifted too hard and strained himself, but he is improving rapidly now and will be able to go to work again in a few days.