

John H. Reid started for Jamestown on Tuesday and when about eight miles southwest of town was overtaken by a severe hail storm and it was with a good deal of difficulty that he was able to get his horse unhitched from the buggy and into shelter. The hail stones were quite large and came down with considerable force and after the storm was over the ground was covered. Mr. Reid returned home expecting to find all his windows gone but was surprised to find that no damage had been done in this vicinity.
