

John H. Reid returned Saturday evening from a trip to the world's fair and points farther south. It is needless to say that Mr. Reid enjoyed the occasion immensely and his letter which is published elsewhere in this issue would indicate that he has lost no time in gathering some valuable information. He went farther down the river by boat and a day or two after he left the boat it was destroyed and he naturally is thankful that the accident did not occur when he was aboard.