
Failed to Notify Auditor

Some months ago, Hesken Slater lost a horse—a neighbor took the horse up, advertised it, but failed to notify the county auditor. While the horse, was in the possession of the man who took it up the owner came one night and took it away. The man who had taken the horse up had him arrested for stealing his own property. The court held that since the man who took up the horse did not obey the law as regards to advertising there was no cause for action and therefore the case was taken from the jury and decided in favor of the defendant.—Minot Optic.
