

While out riding last Sunday night Nels Arneson suddenly found himself on the ground feeling kind of sore and stiff. He got up and then he noticed he didn't have his horses nor the buggy, so he had to get up and walk the rest of the way home, about three or four miles. He found his horses the next day by Carlson's pasture, the horses were kind of used to go there before. He is the second runaway victim on account of thinking of the girls.
