

Byron Hazard and family escaped from what might have been a very serious accident last Sunday. He was driving across the road about two miles north of town, when one of his horses (a three year old colt) became frightened at something, and quicker than you can say scat she was off, the other horse following. The buggy was turned upside down in a twinkling and as luck would have it, all the tugs came unhitched and the horses got away leaving Byron and his family huddled together in the buggy top. Mrs. Hazard hurt her back some which is about all the injury done. Had the tugs remained fastened some of them would undoubtedly have been seriously hurt.
