

large tan colored animal about as large as a calf, dodge away from the railroad track in the gravel pit this side of Hannaford Tuesday morning. Fred Markwood was down to Bald Hill creek last Sunday fishing through the ice, and he says he saw the tracks in the ice of some immense animal. Both Reed and Markwood tell the truth when they have to, and we are inclined to think from their statements that the mountain lions have got into the ravine and hills around Bald Hill creek.

P. S. Munger, the Sanborn operator, has returned to work.
