

OBITUARY.

Harry S. Lyons died yesterday morning at the age of 32 from Septic Peritonitis after an illness of ten days. He leaves a wife and a little baby boy to mourn the loss of husband and father. Ten days ago the deceased was in the bloom of healthy manhood, one of the finest figures of God's handiwork, today he is cut down like a summer flower nipped by an autumn frost. It is indeed a sad case. The wife left alone almost without warning or a last parting word, and the little babe deprived of a father's love and guiding hand. Last Sunday it was thought Mr. Lyons was getting better, but the following day he had a relapse from which he did not recover. He was conscious to the last but did not seem to realize that death was so near at hand and died in a few minutes without a word. His remains will be taken to Montana tomorrow for interment, and it will be a sad home journey for the afflicted wife, who takes with her the sympathy of this entire community.
