

Rev. E. P. Johnson, in jumping a ditch in the lumber yards the other day, slipped as he landed on the other side and falling backward, into the ditch got very nicely plastered with mud and water. He spent the afternoon in E. W. Blackwell's office drying his clothes. The reverend gentleman doesn't mind a little joke like that.