

room door and found Elsie in an unconscious condition. Mr. Nelson hastily carried her downstairs and gave her fresh air and sent for Dr. Kerr. Before the doctor arrived she had regained consciousness and needed no help from the doctor. With the exception of a headache she was all right Saturday and has now completely recovered. She says the last thing she remembers before becoming unconscious was that she tried to get up and get a handkerchief, but couldn't get up; after that it was all blank until she found herself downstairs.
