

W. W. Lewis, assistant cashier of the Red River Bank, of Fargo, died last week of pneumonia after but a brief sickness. The deceased was one of Fargo's foremost business men, an unceasing worker, and was building up for himself a fine business, being in partnership with J. B. Lockhart under the firm name of Lockhart & Lewis, real estate dealers. He was a young man of sterling worth and integrity and Fargo loses one of its brightest business men. He leaves a wife and one baby to mourn his loss. He was a warm friend to those he liked and all who had a personal acquaintance with him admired his manliness and enjoyed his friendship.
