

Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Iverson are the happy parents of twin baby girls, the young ladies arriving at their home last Monday morning. Alex is tickled most to death and set up the cigars quite liberally, but he would have doubled the number of cigars had the girls been boys—because it would have meant an increase of the democratic vote by two. The Courier offers its congratulations to the happy parents and hopes that the little girls will grow up and be a comfort and a joy to them. Dr. Bergstrom attended the case.