

head and telescoping the small bones connecting with the shoulder blades. The shock also caused paralysis, so that he suffered no pain. He was taken to Fargo Saturday and died there Monday morning. His father passed through Fargo while he was still alive but did not know he was there. He went back to Fargo Monday night and will take the remains to Wisconsin for burial.