

Binford Times: Henry Hagle was taken to Grand Forks today for treatment in the state health laboratory of the university, having been bitten by a dog with rabies. Last Friday one of the dogs on the Herman Lucht farm was siezed suddenly with the rabies and before anything could be done to get away from him he bit young Henry once in the left leg and once in the left hand. He then made for the other dog and also a pig and chased the horses in the pasture. It is not known if the horses were bitten. There were no firearms on the place by which to kill him and the men were in a quandary as to how to get out of the danger without being bitten and find some method of killing the mad beast that was biting everything it came in contact with, even to an iron crow bar on which he broke his teeth. He was finally gotten to come to the barn and as he was passing through the door the men squeezed him between the door and wall and held him that way until he was clubbed to death. The other dog was immediately killed. Two days after the pig that had been bitten became mad and before it could be killed it had inflicted wounds upon several of the horses. The utmost care should be taken to prevent any further danger.
