

WEDDING BELLS.

A very pleasant home wedding was consummated at the suburban home of Mr. and Mrs. Miles H. Standish last Sunday at high noon, January 15th, 1905, when their eldest daughter, Nellie, was married to Dr. Edwin L. Goss, of Carrington, Rev. Joseph N. Haskell, pastor of the Congregational church, performing the ceremony, using the ring service.

Miss Josephine McKean, class-mate of the bride in the Sanborn grammar school and also in the State Normal, was maid of-honor, and Mr. Perry A. Pickett, principal of the Fingal public school, attended the groom, Miss Madge Nicoll, girlhood friend of the bride, playing the wedding march during the bridal procession.

The bride was gowned in white and carried bride roses, while carnations, American beauty roses and smilax were used in the decorations.

Dr. Goss is a practicing physician in Carrington, North Dakota, where he has been about three years. He owns a house in that city where the newly married couple will be at home after April 1st.

Many beautiful as well as useful presents were received by the bride.

A limited number of invited guests were present, who, after the ceremony and many and hearty expressions of congratulation and wishes of long life and much happiness, sat down to a bountiful wedding feast, which was discussed amid cheerful conversation and pleasant surroundings.

Mr. and Mrs. Goss later left to drive to Rogers, where they took the Soo train for Carrington.

The marriage comes as a surprise to most of us, and while there may be some regret that an entire stranger has come among us and carried off one of our fairest daughters, yet all join with the Enterprise in extending congratulations.
