
Jamestown Capital—Tom Caldwell was taken to the city hospital this morning with both hands severely frozen, the result of trying to get a ride on the blind baggage of the N. P. coast train. He is said to have been en route from Louisiana to Billings, where his sister lives, and when he was taken off here both hands were badly swollen and causing him much pain. It is believed his hands can be saved. He got on the train at Valley City but the cold was too much for his thin mittens. Caldwell is 23 years old, without trade or profession, says his father is dead, and he does not know the whereabouts of his mother.
