

Bold Wolves.

Last Friday, Alfred Potter, son of C. H. Potter, while plowing had a rather exciting experience with prairie wolves. While passing near a hay stack a wolf suddenly pounced upon his dog, attacking it fiercely. Mr. Potter, who was at some distance noticed another wolf jump up on its hind legs to get a glimpse of what was going on and then went immediately to the assistance of its mate. Young Alfred left his plow and ran to help his dog, boldly kicking the wolves right and left and mixing up freely in the fracas. The boy and dog finally came out victorious and routed the "varmint." All this within two or three miles of town.
