

---

Silas Miller, many years ago a plasterer in this city, now a farmer northeast of Wimbledon, in Griggs county, has been rather unfortunate of late. Eight of his horses were taken sick with influenza. Six of them died and the other two are likely to die. He has been compelled to hire all work done in which horses are used. We understand he is very much discouraged and thinks he will quit farming.

---