

C. W. Lien had a valuable horse badly injured last week while the team was being used on some road work south of town. The team was hitched to a heavy scraper, and in driving into a ditch the implement turned over, the blade striking the heels of the horses and cutting the tendon of one entirely in two. There was no chance to save the animal so it had to be killed.