

Frederick W.

Councilman

---

Fred Councilman, who farmed three miles west of Revere, died at a Chicago hospital on April 25th. He had been sick for several weeks. His brother George, also of the Revere neighborhood died March 31st.

Three years ago he rented his farm to Emil Lowe and moved to Elmhurst, Ill., a suburb of Chicago, where his father-in-law the late Peter Lyle, resided. He made several trips back to the farm and last year spent the harvest and threshing season here.

Deceased was born at Osakis Minnesota. Twenty-eight years ago he and his brother George purchased the Varnum Van Vleet farm in Mabel township and engaged extensively in farming. They prospered, married and builded themselves comfortable farm homes. Then the hard times came. They put in longer days, worked harder, their health broke under the strain and now they are at rest.

Fred Councilman leaves a widow, several children, his aged mother and a brother John of Kensal, and a host of warm personal friends. Hannaford Enterprise.